

 HAPPY ***
4th OF JULY
INDEPENDENCE DAY

Hello Year 2,

Did you know that tomorrow is a special day in the USA. Can you remember which continent it is in?

In the United States on the 4th July they celebrate something called Independence Day. On 4th July 1776 (244 years ago) people in charge in the USA decided that they didn't want our country, and our king at the time, King George III to rule them anymore and declared that they were independant. Can you imagine our country and our queen telling such a big country what to do all of the time?

Maths

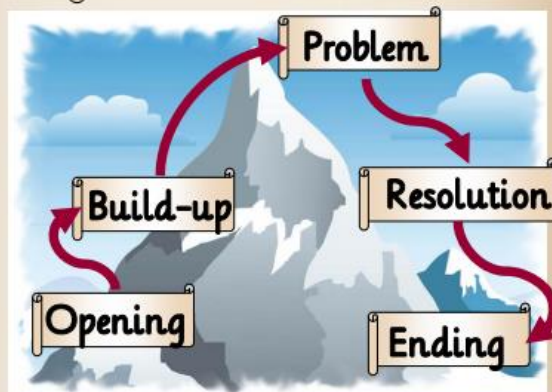

Today is challenge day, instead of doing an online challenge I would like you to try and find some different objects around the house that have got measurements on them for litres, millilitres, grams, kilograms. The best places to look at the kitchen and the bathroom but you might need an older sibling or an adult to help you.

English

Today we are moving onto the resolution, I do apologise as yesterday you needed to write the problem. If you wrote the resolution and did not put in a problem, please now add this to your story. Hopefully, as you are such good storytellers, I am sure you noticed and did it in the correct order.
